SURVIVAL OF THE FITTEST: A Play in Three Acts Ron Rosenfeld

A three-act play, set in Victorian England in the mid-19th century, based upon the competition between Charles Darwin and Alfred Wallace to discover the principles behind natural selection, the cornerstone for theories concerning the origin of species and the basis for modern concepts of evolution. The play addresses the issues surrounding the nature of scientific discovery, creativity, priority and integrity. Based upon the reaction of Darwin, his colleagues and the scientific establishment to the receipt of a letter from Wallace outlining all of the salient points of natural selection.
