The Man in the Iron Mask Alexandre Dumas

The story begins at the time when the King of France was busy with his own money making business and was not bothered about his kingdom. The people of France wanted this King no more as their ruler, so they planned to replace him. There was only one person who was supporting the King. This man of a musketeer who had served the King's father Louis XIII. The King had a twin brother who was separated at the time of birth, so nobody knew about him. This man was later on imprisoned and put behind a mask so that his identity cannot be revealed. As the story develops further, The King falls in love with a young lady who happens to be the fiancée of a soldier named Raoul, the son of Athos (musketeer). For his love the King plans a trick to get Raoul killed. For this death, Athos, Aramis and Porthos plan to take revenge from the King. To accomplish this task they take help of the man in the mask and with his help, the three musketeers plan to kidnap King Louis XIV and replace him with his brother. D`Artagnan, who was still guarding the King, did not agree with his friends plan. After a lot of dramatic events taking place, D`Artagnan finally tries to save his friends at the cost of his own life and career.
