The Brewery Tim Winger, Ray Weatherman

Free Beer? Ray is a machinist at the Anheuser Bush Brewery in Los Angeles, California. The brewery is not unlike manufacturing facilities everywhere. They have massive amounts of dedicated machinery all geared to getting a certain product out the door and to the eventual consumer. These facilities employ a great number of people; they contain a certain amount of industrial risk; and (sometimes in spite of themselves) they manage to get their product out the door to the consumer. However, in this and other breweries of the time, there was free beer in the break rooms, free beer in the lunch rooms, and free beer for anyone who wanted to tour the plant. Mix together an inefficient and probably corrupt union, ineffective and unqualified supervision, and industrial attitudes undergoing change in the 70's and 80's, and free beer, and you have a recipe for entertainment. Follow Ray and a cast of characters as he tells the tale of working men in this environment and shares their stories of life, love, and chaos in a blue collar world. Free Beer? What could go wrong?
