Don't Give Manipulators The Chance To Control Your Life

Emotional or psychological manipulation influences the behavior by particular tactics which may not be logical for the manipulated person and sometimes for other people too. The target may not only modify his behavior but also make him, convinced that there's no other approach to step out of the situation and his relationship with the manipulator is really unavoidable. This is a type of abuse, although it might be as obvious as other types. Psychological manipulation is definitely an emotional mistreatment which may be linked to other types of abuse, for example physical and sexual abuse.

You will find distinction in persuasion and psychological manipulation. Persuasion is not really coercive it values the right of the person to choose and to permit or rebuff the mentioned behavior. In manipulation, you may be thinking apparently the individual is in fact permitted to choose. However, under the shallow pretence associated with sovereignty of preferences, it has an under-current on the subject of emotional threats.

The psychological manipulation entails 2 persons: typically the manipulator and the manipulated within a means of manipulation that has its own characteristics.

In this book, I identify many common tactics that you may be intimately and sadly familiar with, complete with real life examples for each to help you identify them in your daily life. Identifying covert emotional manipulation is tricky but after reading this book you will learn a lot about this.
